Forever Roses

These are real roses that undergo a special preservation process, often using a mixture of glycerin, wax, or other substances, to maintain their shape, color, and texture without the need for water or sunlight. They are natural roses that are treated to last for months or even years, making them a more premium option compared to traditional artificial roses. Forever Roses often have a luxurious, high-quality finish and are marketed as a "premium" or "long-lasting" version of fresh flowers.
